Mrs. Lincoln's Insanity.

Since the death of President Lincoln, his widow, it has continued to decline, not only in vigor of mind, but in physical condition, nothing seeming to avail her in her grief and declining years. So feeble had become the state of her mind, and as a consequence so eccentric her nature and habits of life, that on Saturday last a council of the leading physicians of Chicago and Mrs. Lincoln's personal friends was held to consider what was best to be done for her. The result of the council was an agreement to petition for an order to try the question of her sanity. On Wednesday Mrs. Lincoln was brought into court, and the trial, which resulted in a verdict declaring her to be insane, was begun. When the unfortunate lady entered the courtroom she was pallid, her eye was watery and excited, and her general appearance was that of one suffering from nervous excitement. Accompanying her was her son, whose very feature was marked with sadness. His eyes, too, were suffused with tears, as were those of several others. Mrs. Lincoln took a seat facing the Judge, and by her side sat her counsel and friend, and the biographer of her husband, the Hon. I. N. Arnold. The petitioner, her son, Robert T. Lincoln, took a seat near her and obliquely to her left. Beside him sat the Hon. Leonard Sweet and B. F. Ayer, counsel for the petitioner. The witnesses testified to Mrs. Lincoln's strange imaginings, her expensive and reckless purchases of jewelry and other articles of which she had no need, and gave evidence of having observed indications of mental disturbance on many occasions.

When Robert Lincoln took the stand his face indicated the unpleasantness of the duty he was about to perform, and his eyes were expressive of the grief he felt. Mrs. Lincoln at first looked on calmly, but during the recital of the incident of the family history and reference to the death of his father and brother she gave way to tears and buried her face in her hands. A summary of his testimony is given below.

The action he had taken was said to contemplate, but he had done it in the interest of his mother. He met her in the car upon her arrival from the South, and upon meeting her she was startled. She had the appearance of good health, and did not even seem fatigued by the trip. He asked her to come to his house, but she declined, and went to the hotel. He went with her and took supper. She told him that at the first breakfast she took after leaving Jacksonville an attempt was made to poison her. He occupied a room adjoining hers that night. She slept well that night, but subsequently was restless, and would come to his door in her night-dress and rap. About April 1 she came tapping at his door, he having told her that if she persisted he would leave the hotel. He went to her room April 1, and found her but slightly dressed. She left the room in that condition under some pretext, and the next he knew of her she was going down the elevator to the office. He had the elevator stopped, and tried to induce her to return to her room. She regarded his interference as impertinent, and declined to leave the elevator, but he put his arms about her and gently forced her. She screamed, "You are going to murder me." She had since the fire kept her trunks and property in the Fidelity Safe Deposit Company's building. He called on her the last week in April, and she told him that all Chicago was going to be burned, and that she was going to send her trunks to some country town. She said Milwaukee was too near Oshkosh, where there had been a terrible fire the night before. She told him that his house would be the only one saved, and he suggested to her to leave her trunks with him. The following Sunday she showed him securities for $87,000, which she carried in her pocket. She had spent large sums of money recently. She had bought $600 worth of lace curtains; three watches, costing $450; 700 worth of other jewelry; $200 worth of soaps and perfumery, and a whole piece of silk. He had no doubt she was insane. He had a conference with her cousin and Mayor Stuart of Springfield, and Judge Davis of the Supreme Court, all of whom advised him to the course he had taken. He did not regard it safe to allow her to remain longer unrestrained. She had long been a source of great anxiety. She had always been kind to him. She had been irresponsible for the last ten years. He regarded her as eccentric and unmanageable. There was no cause for her recent purchases, as her trunks were filled with dresses she never wore. She never wore jewelry.

The verdict of the jury adjudging Mrs. Lincoln to be insane declares that the disease is of unknown duration and is not with her hereditary; that she is not subject to epilepsy, and that she does not manifest homicidal or suicidal tendencies. The verdict was received by Mrs. Lincoln without emotion and she did not allow its reading to interrupt the conversation in which she was engaged with Mr. Arnold.

The New York Flower Charity.

The N. Y. Flower Charity has for its object the distribution of flowers and fruit to the sick poor in hospitals and their own homes. During last summer, its fifth season, 25,277 bouquets and plants in pots were sent out to 51 hospitals and 725 private cases. They most earnestly desired to extend their work still further this summer, but for this purpose they must have the active co-operation of their suburban neighbors. If the ladies of a single town will unite in this work, they can surely send a basket of flowers, wild or cultivated, once or twice a week. This should be given in charge of a brakenman or some gentleman coming in on an early morning train, to be left at the express office at the station, addressed to the N. Y. F. C., 239 4th Ave. Westcott's Express most kindly brings all packages free of charge, and the other companies doubtless will not be outdone in this kindness. Those sending flowers will please send them on Mondays or Thursdays, as the rooms 239 4th Ave. are open on those days only, from 10 to 1 o'clock. If our country friends could see the joy which a bunch of their wild daisies or a single one of their fresh, sweet roses can give the inmates of our crowded hospital wards, they would be only too glad to send these messages of "peace and good will." Better than any medicine are such tokens of that kindness which our poor too seldom find in their dreary lives.
